

(To translate this text, copy/paste into Google Translate.)

HSA Eligible Expenses and Ways to Pay Them Fidelity Investments

TRANSCRIPT

Did you know that you can get a tax break when you use your Health Savings Account to pay for your qualified medical expenses? And not just for yourself, but when you pay medical expenses for your spouse and eligible dependents too.

But what qualifies as a medical expense?

The good news is that most medical care and services qualify. Like doctor's visits, dental, dentures, vision care such as eyeglasses and contact lenses, and prescription drugs. Also, your health plan deductible, coinsurance payments, and Medicare premiums, including parts A, B, C, and D. Just remember that once you enroll in Medicare, you can no longer contribute to your HSA, but you can still use it to pay for your qualified medical expenses, including Medicare premiums.

So how can you pay for these qualified medical expenses? There are a couple of ways to pay for your qualified medical expenses using your Fidelity HSA. The most popular is to use your Fidelity HSA debit card. This makes payment for expenses, such as pharmacy prescriptions, quick and simple.

If you receive a doctor's bill in the mail, you can also make the payment with your Fidelity HSA debit card. The Fidelity HSA debit card has no annual fee, and you can view your transactions at any time online in your HSA summary on Net Benefits. If you don't need to use your HSA right away, you may want to pay some or all medical expenses out of your own pocket and save your HSA dollars for future medical expenses. You can reimburse yourself at any time for these expenses, since there's no cutoff date to pay yourself back.

Want to learn more about qualified medical expenses and ways to pay for them with your Fidelity HSA? Just visit your HSA summary on NetBenefits.com.